New Order in the Middle East

An Amusement Park in the Middle East is getting an X-Car standard coaster XV 2000 "G-Force". A similar installation has already been opened in the English Amusement Park Drayton Manor in 2005 (see image). The "V" in the product name refers to "Vertical Coaster" and has been realized with the "G-Force" by a unique LoopLift going upside-down. The opening of the extraordinary ride is planned for 2010.

LoopLaunch

LoopLaunch is the novelty at the EAS in Amsterdam: a compact installation on a base area of a mere 50 m x 10 m (164 ft x 31 ft) which fits into every park. It offers an unheard-of experience to young and old: Thanks to the innovative Non-Inversion Loop it always is an outstanding landmark delivering a lot of fun for every taste with plenty of airtime, but – as the name suggests – without inversion. The X-Car tandem is wearlessly launched out of the station due to the latest magnetic technologies. The energy storage (included by default) is increasing efficiency even more: An all around impressive launch-coaster for every park.

European Attraction Show

This year, Maurer Rides will again be represented at the EAS taking place in Amsterdam from September 30 to October 2. At booth number 707 many extraordinary product innovations will be introduced alongside new layouts for X-Car and Spinning Coaster. Every day, a shuttle service will offer the possibility of visiting nearby Drievliet Park with its X-Car launch coaster "Formule X" upon arrangement.
